Dear James

Thanks for your letter of 29 January 1986, and I'm glad to see that almost all the points were taken on board.

Obviously we have no objection to including a mention of Brackla Estate so long as no personal darts are hurled.

Regarding the map I will be sad to see the silhouettes go as I think they lifted the map out of the general run of cold stereotyped factual information and made it a little bit more couthie. If, however, you cannot work in the silhouettes near enough the correct positions to be an indication to the public, then it will be alright to put in triangles. I don't feel that the accuracy of the positioning of these tops is all that important however go ahead. You can also include the Rushmill Burn, the Clachie Burn and the Birks Burn.

We have run out of guides almost completely and suggest we would take half an order of 5000 copies. As there doesn't seem to be much happening within the next 4 or 5 years, I would think the new issue of the guide could last quite a long time before it needed to be updated, particularly with the good job you have just made of updating it.

Hope the weather improves soon. Regards to Mary.

Yours

S Thomson
